Our Warranty Statement

Warranty Statement

Subject to the terms and conditions contained herein, Toyota New Zealand Limited warrants that any part of your vehicle that is not excluded by the warranty product purchased and is not listed in the following warranty exclusions section, which suffers a sudden or unexpected mechanical or electrical failure will be repaired or replaced to a condition that is in no way inferior to that immediately prior to the failure.

Any defect must be reported to an Authorised Toyota Store immediately after discovery (but within the warranty period) and your vehicle must be made available for repair at the dealer's place of business as soon as practicable.

If you are either not a consumer (as defined in the Consumer Guarantees Act 1993) or you have purchased your vehicle for a business purpose (and your vehicle Sale and Purchase Agreement contains an applicable exclusion from 'consequential loss liability') then apart from the benefits provided to you in the event of a roadside breakdown, this warranty will not extend to consequential loss or damage to either person or property or expenses such as (but not limited to) vehicle rental or loss of use, charges, tolls, and travelling expenses.

Items other than dealer fitted Toyota Genuine Accessories that are classified by your store as being of a non-standard nature will be subject to the respective manufacturers' or installers' own warranty conditions. Such items include LPG/CNG conversion kits and other after-market products.

Your vehicle, along with the Service Record Booklet, must be made available to your Authorised Toyota Store as validation of the vehicle's warranty and service history.

Right to Cancel

You have a right to cancel your Toyota agreement by giving notice to Toyota New Zealand, as warrantor, or to the Authorised Toyota Store from which you purchased the warranty:

- Within five working days after the date on which you receive a copy of this warranty agreement; or
- At any time if we have not complied with our disclosure obligations, unless our failure is minor and you are not materially prejudiced by our non-compliance.

You must also be aware that if this warranty has been entered into as a condition of a Consumer Credit Contract, your right to cancel is covered by the Credit Contracts and Consumer Finance Act 2013, not the Fair Trading Act 1986.

Summary of Consumers' Rights & Remedies under the Consumer Guarantees Act 1993

You have rights and remedies under the Consumer Guarantees Act in respect of the vehicle you have acquired if:

- You are a consumer (as defined in the Consumer Guarantees Act); and
- You have not bought your vehicle for a business purpose and contracted out of the Consumer Guarantees Act.

In summary, when you buy a vehicle, the Consumer Guarantees Act requires that the vehicle be of acceptable quality. Whether a vehicle meets the guarantee of acceptable quality is measured by considering what a 'reasonable consumer' would find acceptable, taking into account matters such as the type of vehicle (new versus used, the age of a used vehicle), the distance travelled, the engine size, the price paid, the information provided about the vehicle, including by the seller, and how much the vehicle has been driven since purchase.

The Consumer Guarantees Act also guarantees that your vehicle is fit for any purpose you tell the trader you need it for, matches the sample or demonstration model, matches any description given of the vehicle, and is able to be legally sold.

Remedies

The remedy you are entitled to for a breach of a guarantee depends on the seriousness of the problem.

If the problem is not serious, the trader from whom you bought the vehicle may choose the remedy. In particular, if the fault is minor and can be remedied, the trader can choose to remedy the fault by repairing the vehicle, replacing it with an identical vehicle or refunding the purchase price. For minor faults you must give the trader the chance to fix the vehicle first.

If a fault is serious, or a fault cannot be remedied, you, the consumer, can choose between rejecting the vehicle and claiming a refund, rejecting the vehicle and claiming a replacement vehicle of the same type and similar value (if one is available) and keeping the vehicle but getting some of your money back.

Toyota New Zealand provides a three year, 100,000km standard manufacturer's warranty for all new vehicles, and a three year, unlimited kilometre Signature Class Warranty for all Signature Class vehicles. For hybrid Signature Class vehicles, the Signature Class Warranty period is four years. This is Toyota New Zealand's estimate of what it considers would be no less favourable to a buyer of a vehicle than is available under the Consumer Guarantees Act to meet the acceptable quality guarantee. For a used vehicle that is not Signature Class, the guarantee of acceptable quality under the Consumer Guarantees Act extends for a period of no more than three years in most circumstances, and could be for a shorter time.

The Toyota Warranty also allows for the reimbursement of towing, accommodation and rental vehicle costs in certain circumstances. These benefits are explained in this Warranty Contract booklet.

If you have purchased your vehicle for business purposes and you have contracted out of the remedies under the Consumer Guarantees Act, the Toyota Warranty will provide you with some of the rights that a consumer has under the Consumer Guarantees Act (specifically, rights relating to the repair or replacement of certain parts that fail, within a reasonable timeframe), as well as the additional rights outlined previously.

What You Get Under Toyota Warranty Compared with the Consumer Guarantees Act

The Toyota Warranty adds to the rights you have under the Consumer Guarantees Act. Specifically, the Toyota Warranty extends the period during which you can expect specified parts of your vehicle to be repaired or replaced in the event of sudden or unexpected mechanical or electrical failure (other than in the excluded circumstances listed in this booklet).
